THE RSAMD CONTEXT

In 1994 RSAMD became the first UK Conservatoire to be awarded degree-awarding powers for taught courses by the Privy Council. Since then the Academy has developed a range of vocationally-orientated degree courses in music and drama performance, including taught Masters courses in vocal and instrumental performance, opera, composition, conducting, acting, directing and producing. In 1998 the RSAMD won springboard funding from the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council to establish a National Centre for Research in the Performing Arts. From October 2000, RSAMD has offered research programmes leading to the awards of Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) and Master of Philosophy (MPhil) of the University of St Andrews. The Academy's first doctorate was awarded in 2005.

RESOURCES

The RSAMD is housed in a modern, specially designed building and has some of the best performance and rehearsal facilities of any conservatoire in Europe. The auditoria include the New Athenaeum Theatre as the principal auditorium for plays and opera, the Chandler Studio Theatre and The Academy Concert Hall. In addition the Alexander Gibson Opera School, which opened in 1998, houses rehearsal and coaching rooms and a stunning performance space. The RSAMD library contains one of the most comprehensive music and drama collections in the UK and features reading and study areas, listening booths for the extensive collection of CDs, cassettes and records and viewing facilities for the video and DVD collection. ICT facilities and a study lab for research students are available. RSAMD research students also have access to the University of St Andrews' library resources.

RELATIONSHIP WITH THE UNIVERSITY OF ST ANDREWS

Research programmes offered by RSAMD lead to awards of the University of St Andrews. Research students will matriculate at both the Academy and the University and will have access to the facilities of both institutions. Programmes of study will be undertaken at, and administered by, RSAMD. All fees will be payable to RSAMD.

A DISTINCTIVE RESEARCH ETHOS

The mission of RSAMD is:

to produce musicians, actors and other professionals in music and drama well equipped to pursue a diversity of careers at national and international level.

As performance to the highest standards is central to all of the Academy's work, RSAMD's research activities will always be located within that context. The key elements of performance and/or creation give RSAMD's research profile a clear and individual identity, both in general as regards research within the Academy and in particular as regards the acceptance of research students and the awarding of research degrees.

SPECIALIST AREAS OF STUDY

RSAMD offers opportunities for suitably qualified students to work towards the achievement of research degrees in appropriate areas of enquiry. Applications will only be successful if it is clear that the proposed research can best be undertaken within a Conservatoire context, in which performance and/or creation is held central.

The specific areas for research degrees will be:

- the processes and methodologies of developing new performance work (music/drama/music theatre), including collaborative and devised performance
- performance
- musical composition, in all genres, for live, electro-acoustic and mixed media
- Scottish music
- methodologies of specialist performance training, including the use of IT.

TYPES OF SUBMISSION

RSAMD will accept any one of three possible forms of submission for a research degree. The final proposal as to which form of submission is most appropriate to a student's work will be agreed between the student and her/his supervisors and submitted to the Research Degrees Committee for approval in good time before the anticipated date of submission. Three forms of submission for the degrees of MPhil and PhD will be acceptable. In the following examples (which relate to PhD), the word "portfolio" is used to signify the presence of performance-centred and/or practice-based work in a submission, and therefore in a student's research processes throughout her/his programme of study. Candidates will be examined on their submissions through a viva voce.

1. Portfolio accompanied by Written Commentary

A substantial body of original work that represents or embodies new knowledge, derived from original research. It will be accompanied by a succinct written commentary (of around 12,500/ 15,000 words) contextualising the production and/or presentation of that original work. The original work submitted must be documented fully in appropriate forms that will be accessible to future researchers.

2. Joint Portfolio with Dissertation

A combination of original work and an extended written text (of around 40,000/50,000 words) which together (but not necessarily separately) represent or embody new knowledge and derive from original research. The original work submitted must be documented fully in a form that will be accessible to future researchers.

3. Thesis

A substantial written thesis (of around 80,000/100,000 words) representing or embodying within the text, new knowledge deriving from original research.

ENTRANCE REQUIREMENTS

The essential qualification for admission to the RSAMD as a research student is the possession of a good honours degree or the attainment of a level of professional achievement equivalent to that of a good honours degree. Within the processes laid out above, a student who possesses a research Master's degree, or has attained a level of achievement equivalent to that of a research Master's degree, may be permitted to enter the Academy as a second-year research student. RSAMD is committed to the principles of the Accreditation of Prior Learning, including experiential learning, and will bring those to bear on the admissions process for its research students. Applicants for whom English is a second language must demonstrate an IELTS score of at least 6.5 – a higher score would be advantageous.

APPLICATION PROCESS

The research proposal is a key part of the application. In general, the most successful applications are strong in three key areas: the proposal itself is strong, showing the context and need for the research with an awareness of previous work in the area; the application shows that the candidate is well-prepared, in terms of their previous experiences and/or training, to undertake the proposed research; and the proposal makes a reasoned case for the proposed course of research being undertaken here at the RSAMD – usually because a particular specialist supervisor or other resource is available here. As noted above, we advise all applicants to discuss their research ideas informally before applying with Stephen Broad (Music) or Ros Steen (Drama).

Research programmes offered by the RSAMD will lead to the award of MPhil or PhD of the University of St Andrews, but initial applications are handled by the Academy.

An application fee of £35, which is non-refundable, must accompany your RSAMD application form. Cheques should be made payable to The Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama (RSAMD).

If you meet the criteria for admission and your proposed research can be supported by the Academy, you will be invited for interview and/or audition. If successful, you will be asked to fill in an application form for the University.

Applicants intending to commence their studies at the beginning of academic year 2010/11 are advised to submit their applications by Friday 29 January 2010.

THE SELECTION PROCESS

Those applicants who meet the admissions criteria and whose proposed research projects accord with RSAMD's research priorities and context will be interviewed/ auditioned. At least two supportive references from appropriately qualified persons will also be required. RSAMD may require an applicant to provide additional material in support of her/his application prior to her/his interview/audition.

An audition panel will be chaired by a specialist member of RSAMD staff and will include other members of staff or external advisers as appropriate. An interview panel will normally be chaired by the Head of Research in the appropriate school and will include at least one other member of staff or external adviser as appropriate. At the conclusion of the interview/audition process, the panel will formulate a recommendation to the Research Degrees Committee regarding the application. In exceptional cases, the panel may defer its recommendation until

- additional material has been requested and received from the applicant; and/or
- the applicant has participated in other interviews/auditions.

The Research Degrees Committee will recommend an applicant's admission to the University of St Andrews. (NB – although the offer of a place is made by the University, students will undertake their research programmes at the RSAMD).

SUPERVISORY ARRANGEMENTS

Supervisors for research students are appointed, with the approval of the University of St Andrews, by the RSAMD's Research Degrees Committee. At least one supervisor must be a member of staff of the RSAMD. A second or joint external supervisor will also normally be appointed.

REGISTRATION AND PROGRESS

Successful applicants will initially be admitted as general research students. The Research Degrees Committee will review their progress after the first year of study (two years in the case of part-time students). On the basis of that review, the Research Degrees Committee will recommend to the University of St Andrews registration for either the degree of PhD or MPhil. After the initial review, the progress of students will be reviewed annually.

FEES: SESSION 2008/09

	Full-Time	Part-Time

DURATION AND MODE OF STUDY

Study may be undertaken on either a full- or part-time basis. The normal duration of study is as follows:

MPhil: 24 months full-time or 48 months part-time.

PhD: 3 years full-time or 6 years part-time. A one-year continuation period is normally allowed.

With the approval of the Research Degrees Committee, it may be possible for a student to change his/her mode of study depending upon individual circumstances.

Students with Disabilities

The Academy welcomes applications from all applicants and has substantial experience in supporting disabled students. Currently, over 15% of students at the Academy have declared a disability or medical condition. Applicants who have a disability or special need and would like further information about facilities and support are invited to contact Jane Balmforth, the Academy Counsellor and Disability Adviser. Jane contacts all applicants who declare a disability or medical condition on their application form, and will provide information about studying at the Academy. If support is required for audition or interview, we would encourage you to help us to make the necessary arrangements by contacting by telephone, in writing or by email either Jane Balmforth (email: j.balmforth@rsamd.ac.uk phone: 0141 270 8282) or Registry (email: registry@rsamd.ac.uk). The Academy Counsellor and Disability Adviser is also available to meet you when you come for audition/interview to discuss your particular requirements, sources of further information and any special funding e.g Disabled Students' Allowance. For more information, you can require a copy of the Academy's booklet 'Information for Disabled Students and Applicants', or download this from the following website – <http://www.rsamd.ac.uk/academy/study>.

Equal Opportunities Policy and Statement

The RSAMD operates an Equal Opportunities Policy. Within the constraints of available resources and in accordance with current legislation, the Academy endeavors to grant equality of opportunity to all applicants, staff and students regardless of gender, sexual orientation, race, ethnic origin, disability, marital status or religious belief, and not to discriminate against them through the application of any unjustifiable factor.

The information you give in response to any questions regarding Equal Opportunities is required only for statistical purposes, eg for monitoring application and admission rates to courses and will not be available to course selectors and will have no bearing on the admission decision.
